Re: Clayton Allison #533030

To Whom It May Concern:

Is Clay innocent or guilty? He has been judged to be guilty of murdering his precious little daughter he considered to be a gift from God. Twelve jurors made this decision. How often do we all decide someone's fate by what we hear, read or believe to be the truth? We judge the intent of one's heart or actions, rightly or wrongly, many times by our own life's experiences. Or by the way information - correctly or incorrectly - slanted or not slanted - is presented to us.

Do I believe Clay is innocent? Absolutely, 100%. Easy for a true friend to say this. But is it really? I've worked with the local Rape Crisis Center and the most difficult emotional cases involved children. How much more would I judge someone that I thought killed a child? I would trust my life - and my young grandchildren - with Clay - with no hesitation.

I have been very close to C.J., his wife, for many years. I trust her to know if she, as Jocelyn's mother, thought Clay was guilty of murdering their child, there is no way she would ever spend one moment of being there for him.

They both love God and have a personal relationship with Jesus. Through it all, we know that they will still trust God.

Sincerely,
Paulette Taylor
